

Copart's War on Waste

Leading online vehicle remarketing company Copart UK is demonstrating their continued commitment to tackling environmental issues and improving the health and wellbeing of their people, by issuing over 1,000 employees across their 17 Operations Centres and Head Office with eco-friendly refillable water bottles.

The idea originally came from Copart's Operations Centre in Chester, who suggested introducing reusable water bottles to help limit the amount of plastic waste generated at their location.

With 18 locations across the UK and over 1,000 employees, Copart took the opportunity to take this idea company-wide to benefit both the environment and their people, encouraging them to drink more water at work for the obvious health and wellbeing benefits of staying hydrated.

Using reusable water bottles in favour of single-use plastic bottles will not only provide money saving benefits to employees but also underpins Copart's Environmental Policy, which commits to reduce waste, control packaging and safeguard the environment.

And, with Copart being keen to positively influence the reduction of plastic waste and the levels of pollution caused by the emissions produced during plastic manufacturing, the organisation took this initiative one step further by taking the time to source eco-friendly bottles made from biodegradable plastic, as opposed to synthetic plastics which can take hundreds of years to decompose.

Jo Ferguson, Head of UK Human Resources, said: "We continuously seek to identify ways we can minimise waste, encourage recycling and improve the health and wellbeing of both our customers and employees. We actively encourage team-mates across our business to put forward innovative ideas, so I am delighted that we have been able to implement this suggestion across all 18 Copart UK locations."
